Id interests may require them I do not refer to the use of these vessels I do not refer to the use of these vessels for any fighting for that would only be to international humilisation but in time of peace vessels of war are a very important noral force to prevent and harmonize differences and act as peacemskers. They carry men trained in the knowledge of in ternational law and international rights, and become advisers and protectors of the citizens of the country engaged in commerce throughout the world. It is lamentable that we shoult be obliged to spond morey upon implements of war wilch have no real value except in time of peace but such seems to be the necessity at the present time.

of the seed to me that there ought to be any to seem to me that there ought to be any to seem to me that there ought to be any to seem to me that there ought to be any to seem to me that there ought to be any to seed for further argument upon this proposition. Some of the gentlemen who have of rehabilitating our Vivy, strengthening it and suilding it up, seem to forget in the consideration of this matter that we need a Vary to-day, and that we can not have at a moment s or a month's or at six months potted first-class armor-clad ships or the swiftest class of steel cruiteers. We yet need a working navy, we need flag officers upon our foreign stations, and, as I said before, these vessels for every purpose of a navy in time of peace are per feetly adapted to the needs of the Navy Department.

With the sole exception of adaptability for warfare they are excellently adapted to the uses to which we propose to put them. Those uses are just as essential, Mr Chairman just as honorable, and they have been in many cases of the entree of the remaining that or the prepared to substantiate the same by onthe property have been in many cases of the city of Experiment.

FRANK MI. LER SHOWS HIS HAND
Presently Mu ler turned round 'Do you know why I have told you this Om Silast' he asked "No"
"Because I want you to understand that you and all the Englishmen in this country are in a cotting and whether it goes for you or against you, you must suffer You Englishmen have many enemies. You have got all the trade and own nearly half the land, and you are always standing up for the black people whom the Boers hate. It will go hard with you if there is a war. You will be shot and you houses will be burned and if you loss the day, those who escape will be driven out of 'be country it will be the Transvant for the Transvanters, then, and Africa for the Africantiers."
"Well Frank Muller, and if all this should come to pass what of it? What are you driving at Frank Muller; You don't show me yout band has this for nothing."
The Boer laughed Of course I don't Om Silas. Well if you want to know I will tell you what I mean. I mean that I alone can protect you and your blace dind people in the bad times that are coming. There was some look upon it, some indefinable light that day—such is the power that love has to phras all human things with the tent of the wild and evil if and who adored her with the deep and a vago force of his dark nature. For a mome it he paused, half regretful, half afraid. Was it will to medide with her and to build up plans for her everthrow and that of all she clung to? Would it not be better to let her be, to go his way and leave her to go hers in peace? She did not look quite like a woman standing there but more like something belonging to another world, some subject of a higher power. Men of powerful but undisciplined intellect like Frank Muller are never entirely free from superstition, however free they may be from religion, and he grow superstitions, as he was apt to do. Might three not be not unknown penalty for treading such a flower as that into the mire—into mire mixed perchange with the blood of those she loved? For a few seconds he hesitated. Should he throw up the whole thing leave the rebellion to look; after itself, marry one of Hans Coetzees daughters and trek to the Old Colony, or Bechanaland, or anywhere! His hand began to lighten on his bridle roin and the lorge to answer to the pressure. As a first step toward it he would turn away to the left and avoid her, when suddenly the thought of his successful rival flash d into his mind. What: leave her with that man? Never! "How are you, Bessie? he said, in a quiet voice; but ahe, looking into his face, saw that it belied his voice. It was alive with evil possione that seemed to make it positively lurid, an effect that its undoubted beauty only intensified.
"I am quite well, thank you, Mr Muller," she answered, at he began to move homeward, commanding her voice as well as she could, but feeling dreadfully frightened and lonely Elhe knew something of her adradres's character, and feared to be left aions with him, so far from any help, for nobody was about now, and they were more than 300; yards from the house.

He stood before her, so that she could not pass without actually pushing past him. "Why are you in such's hurry?" be said. "You were standing still enough just now "fis is time for me to be getting in. I want to see a yout the supper,"

The Successful Remedy for Nasal Catarrh CATA ? ? " fust be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will, by its own action, reach all the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces The history of the efforts to treat eaterth during the past few years demonstrates that only one remedy has met these con-ditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm This safe and pleasant remedy has masered catarrh as nothing else has ever ione, and both physicians and patients reely concede this fact. The more disressing symptoms quickly yield to it, and a multitude of persons who have for years porne all the worry and pain that catarrh an inflict, testify to radical and permanent ures wrought by it Ely's Cream Balm OWEGO sens the extreme sensibility of the nerve centers to cold and all external arritants, and is followed by no reaction whatever A particle of the Balm is applied into each nostril—it is quickly absorbed an i allays inflan Causes no pain—la agrecable to use—convenient and cleanly—Sold by every druggist or sent on receipt of price
